Inside the Gray - Workbook L St George

I liked the imagery when it first came to me... “Once upon a time raising teenagers was not so complicated. Once upon a time teen issues were primarily painted in tones of black and white. Once upon a time gray was just a child.” But if the words only paint an image, what good are they? The same can be said of God’s Word. James 1:22-25 says, “But don’t just listen to God’s word. You must do what it says. Otherwise, you are only fooling yourselves. For if you listen to the word and don’t obey, it is like glancing at your face in a mirror. You see yourself, walk away, and forget what you look like. But if you look carefully into the perfect law that sets you free, and if you do what it says and don’t forget what you heard, then God will bless you for doing it.” NLT How many times have I taken in God’s Word and then foolishly walked away without adopting what I read as part of my lifestyle? The answer, I am afraid, is more than I care to admit. I have found a remedy to correct my foolishness, however. A pen... There is something beautiful and mysterious about putting a pen to paper. A lesson presented with a list of queries has transforming capabilities. Once a pen hits a page, theory moves from a spoken word to a personal reflection to a call for action. Black and white lessons read in a book are not so easily discarded when generalizations become tailor-made truth. Such is the job of this workbook – to take the lessons from Inside the Gray – Finding Black & White Answers for Parenting Teens and help readers to transform their lives. As you walk through the exercises of each chapter, may our Father in heaven find you not just studying to prove yourself worthy but also abounding in the fruitfulness of obedient actions as outlined in His timeless Word.
