Our minds are the tunnel that leads our eyes to clarity. We do not see with our eyes but with our minds. Like the Iceberg where 90% is hidden beneath the ocean and 10% is left to be seen, therefore it is with our minds that we interpret the truth.

Throughout the entire chapters of this book, I present a reasonable account in my explanation for every paragraph written. The way in which I've expressed my understanding of the stories that are conveyed in this book will seem to you more like naked thoughts taking a bath in a pool of metaphors.

Like they say, "there's light at the end of the tunnel." What I intend to deliver throughout every page of this book is that light, a thoughtful interpretation of the moral dilemma of societal values. I believe that thinking is the quest to know what's here about; it is our own assessment our own interpretation of life. Although our thoughts may be limited by true knowledge, through thinking it's possible that we can explore new dimensions, and thereby surpasses these limitations.

With that said, I welcome your support and I send you musical greetings from the inner space of my mind to your melodically tranquil inner space, and may our inner space duet blend beautifully with the symphony of the universal orchestration.
