Fifteen-year-old Wisteria's been spiritual her whole life, a self-proclaimed budding Buddhist. But when her little brother, Noah, dies in a tragic accident, her spirituality will become her cosmic undoing. Being the atypical teen, leads her to rediscovering a latent power: the ability to catch souls...and her little brother, Noah, becomes her first catch. Meanwhile heaven's taken notice of Wisteria, and is none too pleased. Irim, an angel of the oldest order, instructs Noah to have Wisteria find the twelve animal embodiments of the Chinese calendar, hoping it will pull her back to the physical plane, putting an end to her soul catching for good. The only problem is, it has the opposite effect, and now Wisteria's stronger than ever. So, if close-knit relationships won't stop her powers, how about romantic entanglements? Enter Gavriel. He might be an angel, but he's no saint. He's never been keen on being in heaven before his time, having the correct anatomical parts but no outlet to use them, not to mention his love of free will, which humans squander and he'd love to embrace. When God's decree and free will clash, how can Wisteria possibly extricate herself unscathed? And the bigger question may be: Does she really want to?
