Jordan Hammersmith is a middle-aged psychiatrist with a fatal medical diagnosis, no family to put at risk, and the unique opportunity to carry out an audacious act of political protest. He will be in the audience when President Stanley Aldrich proposes a weapons system that will randomly subject unknown countries to pre-emptive nuclear strikes when they are identified by an automatic computer program as thwarting America's vital interests. Many, including the opponent in the President's tight re-election race, question the Chief's sanity. Jordan has the legal power to bring about an enforced evaluation of Aldrich's mental condition. Yet this man with nothing to lose has fallen newly in love, and the government has learned of his plan and begun a covert campaign of deterrence against him. At stake is the possible survival of the planet against one man's chance for a few final months of happiness.
